This group has been in operation for 2 years, now. It hardly seems that long, does it?

During that time, I have refrained from any participation in advocacy or training and withheld my information from dissemination to give the other groups who think they can do the same thing that American Family Advocacy Center (AFAC) and Family Rights Advocacy Institute do the opportunity to do it without competition from any of us.

That isn't to say that I haven't received requests for help. I have. I simply ask why they didn't seek aid from any of the other groups out there. They did seek help, and were dissatisfied with what was offered. AFRA and CPS Watch didn't get back to them, or wanted money, or didn't know what they were talking about.

Let's see what has occurred in the past two years:

- Virtually all online groups have been very inactive. Nobody is talking or sharing information any more.
- Nobody has published anything new or innovative or effective which was not derived from my published and unpublished works.
- AFRA has split into factions, each faction backbiting the other.
- CPS Watch has further fractionalized any unity. After 11 years of fighting CPS, Cheryl Barnes still hasn't learned how to avoid CPS intervention and criminal charges in her own life.
- The grassroots family rights movement is dead. Nothing has happened legislatively, or in the courts, which AFAC and FRAI was not a participant in.
- People are reinventing the wheel, and none of the new inventions are getting the job done.
- The sheer numbers of aggrieved people willing to participate has declined dramatically, mostly out of fear and distrust of those who profess to be leading this movement.
- There is no leadership, no vision, no plan, just a bunch of finger-pointing crybabies blaming everyone else for their own failures. Nothing has evolved to take the place of AFAC and FRAI.
- CPS interventions have gotten bolder, more abusive and more numerous while the presence of credible family rights activism has grown correspondingly less influential.

Conclusion. . . .not only has Leonard Henderson and Bill Tower destroyed AFRA, they destroyed everything that had been built up long before they appeared on the scene.

How can that be? I thought Barnes and Henderson and Tower and all the other STM's knew everything we knew? I thought they said they could do it as good as we could do it? I thought they could write the books, and give the training and and pass the laws and advocate?

I gave them their chance to shine.
Why didn't they?

Anyone?
